Our Partners

Led by the Hampton Roads Workforce Council, the Regional Workforce Training System includes local partners, Northeastern Workforce Development Board (NWDB) and College of the Albemarle, as subawardees. Other local partners include a variety of employers who are connected to the maritime industry through production of goods and services or through connections with the defense industry. Urban Leagues of the Central Carolinas is also connected through this grant and offers a variety of services and assistance for job seekers and local businesses.

Our Mission is to connect locals with training opportunities and careers in the maritime industry, fostering an environment of strength and career readiness!

In northeastern North Carolina, we've been building boats for hundreds of years. You can be apart of our growing maritime industry and help continue this tradition. Opportunities include careers in Welding, Electrical, Plumbing, Diesel, Trucking, and more!

HIRING NOW

"OUR STRENGTH IS OUR PEOPLE."

EMPLOYMENT SPOTLIGHT

Hector Bermudez

“Five years ago when I came straight out of high school, I didn’t have any clue what this was about or anything. It was a little scary at first, because you want everything to be perfect the first time you do it, but I have some pretty good leaders that walked me through the process. A year or two later, I got the hang of it, and now working feels like a hobby. The people you work with every day, it’s like family.”

Albemarle Boats is currently recruiting for boat-building positions with a variety of skill sets. Experience is preferred, but we are considering those with a positive attitude and good work ethic, who are eager to learn the craft. On-the-job training is available.

Amber Fluhr

Career Advisor for Maritime Training

I engage with individuals interested in our training programs, guiding them through the enrollment process and offering ongoing support. I also manage cases, ensuring participants receive the assistance they need. Additionally, I handle the uploading of data into our EDA system, ensuring accuracy for analysis. Furthermore, I facilitate access to tuition and provide various supportive services to ensure participants thrive in their educational journey.

Not all careers in the Maritime industry involve boats or water. In fact, many of the fastest growing jobs in our area are those that provide direct support through advanced technical training in other areas. We provide tuition assistance and financial support to aspiring candidates interested in these training programs.
